

Revolutionizing Our Couple and Revolutionizing Our World!

A One Day Workshop: March 19, 2017

A Workshop for Couples of Any Kind Who Are Ready for a New View of Themselves!

Couples still make up a big part of our society, even if those couples don't necessarily exist happily ever after. Gay, straight, trans, friends, many tend to couple and form little units of friendship, security and sometimes even love, not only for themselves but for the next generation of humans.

Good as far as it goes. But generally speaking, our view of our couple is personal only. We couple to try to provide emotional or material support for ourselves. In this paradigm, the couple is the place to escape TO, to get away from the harshness of the world. But what if we realized that we are actually a primary unit in our society and that revolutionizing couples would actually revolutionize our world?

What if we saw the couple, not as a place to escape to, but as a seed for a world where there is safety for all?

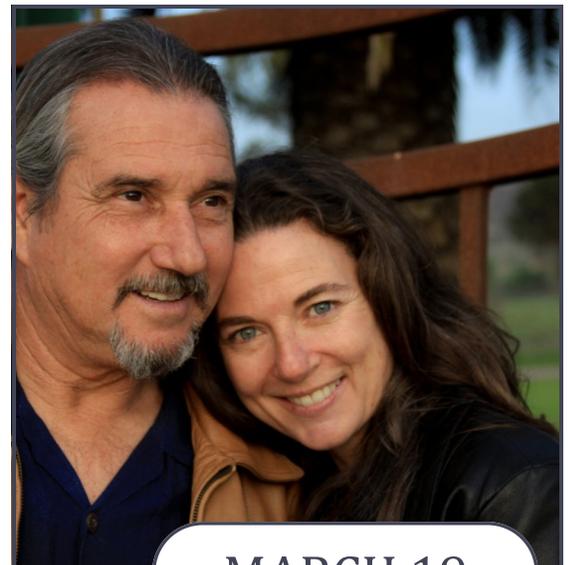

How could we do this? We would:

- End competition between us
- Embrace tools of mutual support
- Spread our influence to other couples and people everywhere.

But how do we spread our influence? How do we develop creative ways of supporting society? To do that, we would have to start by transforming the concept of coupling as just a personal matter. We would have to see the couple as a primary unit of society, integrated into the world, rather than apart from it: an invisible underpinning of society transformed into a network of healthy, caring couples creating a ubiquitous source of support and compassion throughout society.

If you are dedicated to supporting a cooperative, loving and mutually supportive couple AND you would like to see how couples can help revolutionize relationships in our world, come to this workshop. In this workshop, we'll explore our current view of couples, where that view comes from and why we hang onto it. And we'll start exploring, visualizing and reinventing our view of the couple in our world. Who knows where this goes?

Let's co-create something new! Join us and invite others!
